

German V. Dziebel

The Global Diversity of Kinship Terminological Patterns:
Implications for the “Peopling of the Americas”
and the “Out-of-Africa” Model of Human Dispersals

Stanford University
2006

Table of Contents

Introduction
Kinship Studies as a Relational Science: Unearthing the Roots of Relation, Rationality, Race, and Religion in the 19 th Century Thought
Anthropology, Linguistics and Logic
Lewis H. Morgan, Augustus De Morgan and Charles S. Peirce: Kinship, Relations, and Iconicity
Lewis H. Morgan, Max Müller and Ralph W. Emerson: Relations, Rationality and Religions
Fedor Buslaev, Pavel Lavrovsky, Johann Buschmann and Friedrich Müller: Kinship in Lexicon and Grammar
The Common Source of Kinship Studies and Anthropology
Consanguinity, Affinity, and Mortality: The Structure of a Symbolic System
Kinship and the Studies of Human Evolutionary History
The Basic Logical Pattern
Kin Terms and Language Structure
The Historical Typology of Kin Terminologies
Ancestral Pattern: Dravidian or Kariera
The Range of Horizontal and Vertical Variation in Kin Terminologies
Sibling Typology
Correlations between Sibling Types and Cross-Generational Equations
Facing a Paradox: Implications of Kinship Terminological Evolution for the Human Origins Research and the Peopling of the Americas
References	